Bankers Advancing It To China Make Demand For More Security

Nippohese Assert They Have First Call On Salt Tax

REPORT AWAITED

Hsu En-yuan To Present Statement Of Deals He Made In U.S.

(American Press Wireless)

Chicago, November 14.—The bankers group which is negotiating a loan of 30,000,000 to the Northern Government of China has demanded that the loan be secured by a lien on the salt tax and other additional sources of revenue.

Objections have been made by Japanese financial interests as members of the group of bankers composing the international consortium on the ground that this consortium had first call on the salt tax by previous arrangements with China.

REPORTS DISAGREEMENT

Washington, November 14.—Efforts being made to extend a loan to China to tide over what is regarded as a desperate situation existing in the country have come to a standstill owing to a disagreement over the security offered.

Look To U. S. To Make First Loan To China

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 17.—The statement on high authority published by the Times on November 10 from its New York correspondent that "the bankers connected with the Four Power Consortium believe it inadvisable to make a loan to China until the United States Treasury has led the way with an advance to the Chinese Government of from 25 to 30 million dollars to enable China to demobilise her army," disposes of a drop of rumors, including the report of an alleged interview with Hsu En-yuan at Mukden while he was still at sea.

The Shun Tien Shih Pao reports that Hsu En-yuan arrived at Tientsin yesterday which is up to time, as he is scheduled to arrive in Peking today. On his arrival in the Capital a statement regarding his negotiations in America may be expected.

As has already been indicated in a previous despatch, it is believed that an advance from American sources, whether from the Treasury or a continuation of the Abbott Loan, would constitute a basis for the participation of America in the new Consortium, in which it is now believed that Japan will take part on conditions satisfactory to China.

The Wei Yi Pao reports that Yen Kung-chow has been nominated Vice-Minister of Finance on the recommendation of Chow Tse-chi.

Rumors of Mrs. Leeds' engagement to prominent European nobles have reached this country at different times, but nothing ever came of them. Chinese Laborers Anxious To Fight Issue Of Shantung

Spirit Of Patriotism Shown By Men Behind Lines In Europe

Patriotism among the Chinese laborers behind the trenches and their spirit of sacrifice were told in an interesting lecture Saturday by Dr. C. C. Wang, managing director of the Peking-Hankow Railway, before the World Chinese Students' Federation. Dr. Wang recently returned from the Paris peace conference, where he served on the Chinese peace delegation. He left for Peking Sunday.

The laborers were anxious to return to China when war was ended, according to Dr. Wang, but when the Shantung issue reached their ears, they began to make earnest inquiries about the fate of the province.

"What about Shantung? Are we going to get Tsingtao back?" were the anxious questions and all of them volunteered to serve, if China had to fight for the return of Shantung. When the news about Shantung became alarming, one of the laborers sent several hundred francs, his two years' saving, to the Chinese delegation and said that he wanted to do his bit to make the issue a triumph for China.

The speaker concluded by warning all patriotic Chinese to guard against the menace of internecine warfare with its suicidal effect.

Premier Lloyd George Defines Attitude Of Allies Toward Russia

Does Not Believe Entente Should Drop Pride To Parley With Bolsheviki—Peace Not To Be Secured In That Way

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 13.—There was a large attendance in the House of Commons this afternoon, members being anxious to hear the Prime Minister reply to numerous questions of which notice had been given regarding the Russian policy outlined by the Prime Minister in his much-criticised Guildhall speech.

Mr. Lloyd George said that the Allies' continuous refusal to act in connection with the so-called peace advances from the Soviet Republic, received through irresponsible agencies had been justified by events. He categorically denied that any persons on his behalf or to his knowledge had ever interviewed Bolshevik representatives with the object of entertaining peace negotiations. He did not agree with the argument that the Allies should drop their world pride and enter into communication with the Bolsheviks and in his opinion peace could not be secured in Russia in that way.

EXPLAINS DRAWBACKS

Mr. Lloyd George went on to dwell on the difficulties of the Russian situation owing to the fact that a vast majority of Russians very quickly changed their allegiance and also to the complications caused by provincial movements, for example in Ukraina. These drawbacks, he said, contributed to check the opening up of trade which it was the Allies' policy to encourage.

The Government, the Prime Minister declares, had no intention of departing from the policy towards Russia laid down by himself in April and more recently by Mr. Winston Churchill and Mr. Austen Chamberlain. He stated emphatically that the Government could not contemplate the assumption of new financial burdens to assist Russia, but the Government had an overwhelming sense of the importance of bringing peace to Russia which was essential to the reconstruction of the world.

The present condition of Russia, Mr. Lloyd George went on, was one of the contributory causes of the high prices which were undoubtedly a dangerous form of Bolshevik propaganda. There were indications that the German reactionaries were using the present position in Russia to strengthen their influence with all Russian parties.

SHOULD END STRIFE

From the humanitarian point of view it was no less important that the civil war which was destroying the economic life of Russia, impoverishing the world, and slowly decimating the inert population should be brought to an end as soon as possible. That was why the Government had always been ready to take any reasonable opportunity of settling the Russian question on terms which would really bring peace, order and constitutional government to Russia and which would be acceptable to the Russians themselves.

The Prime Minister stated in conclusion that the Government was willing to have a discussion on Russia, if the House desired it, but he deprecated a discussion at present. He gave an assurance that the Government would inaugurate no new policy nor commit the country to any fresh commitments without previous discussion in Parliament.

Paris, Nov. 11.—French circles were much struck by Mr. Lloyd George's suggestion in his Guildhall speech that the Allies might renew the attempt to deal with the Bolsheviki by way of a conference.

The general opinion in France is that no such attempt could meet with success, as it is held that the Bolsheviki cannot be suppressed by mere words.

London, Nov. 13.—In the House of Commons today Mr. Lloyd George announced that it was proposed to hold soon an International Conference at which the Allied Ministers would consider the problems which the Peace Conference had not yet been able to settle, including that of Russia.

Ohio Goes Wet; Vote May Turn U.S. Back To Drink

(American Press Wireless)

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 14.—The official count Wednesday of the state election indicated that the State of Ohio by a majority of 641 voted against the ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment to the constitution.

The Ohio state election has more than passing significance. In an effort to prevent the United States from going dry in January, the "wets" have attacked the validity of any ratification of the prohibition amendment to the Federal constitution by a State legislature, unless the laws of the particular State stipulate that the Legislature shall have a ratifying power superior to that of the people at a general election. In States, where such a provision is not expressly made by law, they take the stand that while the Legislature can amend the State constitution, ratification of an amendment to the Federal constitution must be submitted to popular vote.

Led by the California Wine Association, members of which may suffer a trememdous loss in vineyard valuation if the country goes dry, they have selected seven states, whose legislatures have ratified the prohibition amendment, for a test.

Upon the courts' interpretation of the ratification question hinges the question of whether the country shall go dry. In the states of Oregon and Washington, the Supreme Courts have held that the Legislatures have the ratifying power and that there is no need of calling a special election.

Fighting this ruling, the wine men have appealed to the United States Supreme Court. In California, the Attorney-General has virtually conceded the point taken by the anti-prohibitionists and an election has been called.

The Ohio legislature ratified the constitutional amendment. The despatch preceding, indicates that the people take a contrary view to that of the legislature. If the Supreme court upholds the wine men and elections are called in the respective states, the prohibition movement in America may take a different turn and the country may remain wet.

FOOCHOW JAPANESE ASSAULT STUDENTS; FEELING IS HIGH

Shanghai Associations Ask Official News When Reports Are Receive

A number of students were fatally stabbed by Japanese in Foochow and several police officers and merchants were injured by the islanders Sunday night, according to telegrams received by various local organisations yesterday. The messages alleged that the Japanese assaulted the students without cause and wounded the police and merchants when they interfered, and feelings run high throughout the province.

Strong diplomatic representation is asked in telegrams sent to Peking last night by the local Fukien Guild, the Hunan and Hupeh Guild and the Shanghai Society for the Maintainance of Internal Peace. Other organisations that received the alarming news were the Shanghai Students' Union, the Shanghai Shopkeepers Union and several private commercial houses.

Canton Students Released; Newspaper Men In Jail

Journalists Are Arrested For Reports Published Following Raid On Sincere Store

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Canton, Nov. 17.—Wei Pang-ping, The Commissioner of Police, has released the students arrested in connection with the raid on Sincere's, upon their principals guaranteeing to control them. Wei has discouraged public meetings which might lead to further disturbances.

The police have ceased arresting journalists for printing "seditious matter," since the newspapers have abstained from publishing further "seditious" articles. Fifteen newspaper men are still in jail.

Canton, November 16.—The Military Government is willing to release the students arrested on the occasion of the raid on Sincere's Store on condition that they sign a bond to keep the peace. The students have not yet complied. Twelve newspaper offices were searched and thirty newspapermen arrested for sympathising with the students and criticising the Government in editorial articles.

WANT OFFICIAL OUSTED

Non-Cantonese politicians are intriguing to secure the removal of the Police Commissioner, Wei Pang-ping, who is strongly suppressing small foreign goods dealers for the boycott of the big companies using the students agitation as a pretext.

Tsen Chun-hsuan and Tuchun Mu Ying-hsien have gone to Kwangsi to confer with Lu Ying-ting with a view to reorganising the Military Government and settling the appointments to the permanent Civil and Military Governorships. An attempt is being made by a certain party to remove Mu Ying-hsien and fill the Civil Governorship. Chang Chin-fang is at present acting as Civil Governor. It is unlikely that the Government will remove Wei Pang-ping immediately although one of Lu Ying-ting's lieutenants, Ma Chi, is already scheduled for the post.

Over thirty Canton Chinese editors were arrested and a number of Chinese newspapers suppressed Sunday by Mr. Wei Pang-ping, chief of the Canton police, as a result of their support for the students' agitation against Japanese, according to telegrams received by local Chinese papers yesterday.

The police chief has also issued a proclamation, forbidding students to participate in destroying Japanese goods saying they will be treated as local brigands if they are found attempting to sieze Japanese goods for destruction.

Korea's Former Minister At Japanese Court Makes His Escape To Shanghai

Baron Kim Ka Chin Uses 'Underground Railway' To Join Provisional Government

Existence of an "underground railway" between Korea and China was revealed yesterday when it was ascertained that Baron Kim Ka Chin, diplomat and leader in the fight for Korea's independence, had reached this city. The "underground route," similar to that operated from South to North for fleeing slaves in American Civil War days, was successfully used by the Baron, his son and one servant, in spite of the efforts of the Japanese to prevent the diplomat's escape from his native land.

Disguised as coolies, with heads and faces swathed in mantles and their bodies covered with rags, the Baron and his son traveled in third-class railway carriages, waded through swamps, crossed rivers in dugouts, hid in fields and slashed their way through underbrush for eight days and nights before winning their liberty.

IS 74 YEARS OLD

Although the Baron is 74 years of age he kept pace with his younger companions and, he declared yesterday to THE CHINA PRESS, is feeling vigorous and ready to resume his task of aiding his countrymen to win their freedom from Japanese oppression.

Baron Kim is the first Korean of high rank to escape from his native land since the Japanese raised the barrier which resulted in the arrest of Crown Prince Yi Kang at Antung Station when he sought to flee to Shanghai. The fate of the Prince, the Baron said, is uncertain but he is convinced that the members of the party that accompanied the late Emperor's son will be put to torture.

WAS CABINET MEMBER

Five years as Korea's minister to Japan and service in the Imperial Cabinets, where he held the portfolios successively as Minister of Agriculture, Minister of Commerce and Minister of Justice, have given Baron Kim a keen insight into the workings of the Japanese mind as well as a thorough understanding of the affairs of Korea.

When the Korean Imperial Government was tottering it was Baron Kim who organised a society known as Dai Hahn Hup Hoi, of which he was president for three years. This society was formed for the purpose of advising the Imperial Government politically and to carry the will of the people to the throne.

It will be seen that the arrival of Baron Kim in Shanghai materially strengthens the forces of the Korean Provisional Government, which is making its headquarters here.

MAKES PERILOUS TRIP

Being so well known to everyone in Seoul, the Baron had to use the most careful strategy to make his escape. The story of his journey here is a thrilling tale of intrigue and adventure.

Having decided that despite his advanced years he was physically able to undergo the ordeal, the Baron laid his plans for the attempt. Knowing that it would be impossible to board a train without detection at Seoul, he succeeded in reaching an outlying village, many miles from the city. There he, and the members of his party, entered third class railway coaches and traveled for some distance by rail. The exact route, for obvious reasons, is not revealed.

Then came a perilous march, overland and by devious routes through rough country, it was begun and continued for more than 30 miles. Other conveyances, none of them confortable nor lacking in danger, were used to complete the journey into Chinese territory.

Worn and exhausted from the hardships and perils of the journey, Baron Kim hurried to Shanghai without stopping to rest. After conferring with his colleagues in the battle for independence, the Baron has gone into retirement for a few days while he recuperates.

But, he said yesterday, he feels strong and very happy in the thought that he has been victorious in his first effort to circumvent the oppressors and that he is confident that when the world is brought to realise just what Japan's seizure of Korea means his land will once more be numbered among the free nations of the earth.

Confirming the stories of Japanese atrocities committed on Korean school girls, the story of which was published recently in THE CHINA PRESS on the authority of a lady missionary who investigated the situation, the Baron said that not half the truth has yet been told.

TELLS OF OUTRAGES

"It is too inhuman and outrageous for publication," he asserted. "I am not surprised that there is disbelief in some quarters when the Japanese attitude toward Korea is recounted; I realise that the truth, in this instance, is almost unbelievable. But if the world could realise what is transpiring in Korea, under Japanese domination every day, my nation would be freed at once.

"There is no class or faction behind the demand for Korean independence; it is the cry of the whole of an outraged and oppressed nation. Coolie and nobleman alike are determined that Korea shall be free. And that determination will exist as long as there is one Korean alive. Total extermination of our race is the only means whereby Japan can still the cry."

Hungarian Premier Has 48 Hours To Organise Coalition Cabinet

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, November 12.—Bulgaria has notified the Supreme Council of its readiness to sign the Peace Treaty. It is expected that the ceremony will be arranged for next week. The Bulgarian Premier M. Stamboulinski has left Sofia for Paris.

The Council has decided that Rumania's reply to the Council's Note of October 3 is unsatisfactory. Although most courteous, the reply is extremely evasive. The Rumanians are willing to retire to the Theiss but decline to respect the original armistice frontiers, and also decline to nominate a member to the Inter-Allied Commission to compile the value of the requisitions made by the Rumanians in Hungary.

The British and America Delegations to the Peace Conference have notified their intention to leave France early in December.

Copenhagen, November 12.—A Budapest telegram states that the Supreme Council has sent an ultimatum to the Hungarian Premier, Dr. Friedrich, to form a Coalition Cabinet within forty-eight hours or retire.

Paris, Nov. 11.—The Rumanian Government has communicated to the Supreme Council its decision to sign the peace treaty in its entirety.

Americans Announce Intention To Leave

(American Press Wireless)

Paris, Nov. 12.—The announcement of the American Mission to the effect that it will leave for the United States during the first part of December has caused deep disappointment which has increased during the last few days to such a point that Italy, and France are now urging the Americans to remain in Paris until the pending problems are solved.

Great Britain appears just as anxious as the United States to wind up the Peace Conference and turn over the unfinished business to the Commission of Ambassadors or the various Foreign Offices. France and Italy on the other hand are strongly opposed to ending the Conference the first week in December, leaving unsolved several important questions.

The French and Italian diplomats in Paris are inclined to interpret the decision of the American Mission as a victory for the United States for which they have each been in favor, of the United States withdrawing from all European affairs. Through Allied officials the Herald correspondent said he believed that America was making a mistake in withdrawing in December.

"Home by Christmas seems to be the thing upmost in the minds of the American mission," it is said. "The plan to turn over the pending questions to the Ambassadors and Foreign Offices will prove unsatisfactory and where the Council may have taken several months to reach a decision, the Foreign Offices will take several years. There should be a Supreme Council sitting in Paris until all matters before the Council are disposed of. We do not blame the Americans for wanting to close the doors of the Hotel Crillon but they should at least keep some plentipotentiary in Paris with authority to act for his country."

Budapest Gives Welcome To Hungarian Army

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, November 16. (Via Lyons and Koukaza).—A Budapest telegram of yesterday's date says:

The Hungarian National army this morning entered Budapest. No untoward incident occurred to mar the proceedings. The population of the Capital welcomed the troops as enthusiastically as if they had been a victorious army making its triumphal entry. Public buildings and private houses were decorated with flags, and women and girls threw flowers to the troops as they marched past. Cardinal Csernoch, Primate of Hungary, will officiate at a thanksgiving mass in front of Parliament, and this evening there will be a gala performance at the opera, followed by a big reception given by Dr. Friedrich, the Premier.

EVACUATE CITY

Paris, November 15.—According to a Budapest telegram the Rumanian troops yesterday evacuated that part of the city of Buda on the right bank of the Danube.

The bridgehead of this part of the city has been occupied by the Hungarian National Army. The Rumanians also evacuated the city of Pest. In the meantime detachments of the Budapest Volunteers will maintain order. The telegram adds that the daily life of the Capital has not undergone any change. The ceremonial entry of the Hungarian National Army with the Commander-in-Chief Admiral Horthy at its head takes place today. Great preparations have been made to receive them.

CLUB WOMAN GUESTS OF NOTED COLLECTORS

Literary Department Invited To See Rare Porcelains, Bronzes And Jades

A group from the Literary Department of the American Woman's Club, Monday afternoon, November 17, visited the magnificent collection of Chinese bronzes, porcelains and jades, owned by Mr. Iwan Dolgorouckoff. After serving a bounteous tea to his guests Mr. Dolgorouckoff, with art-lover's enthusiasm explained the merits of the various collections assembled in his rooms; of pottery dating back to the Hsu dynasty, and of porcelains ranging from the Tang dynasty, through the Sung and Ming down to the comparatively recent Chien Lung and Kang Hsi periods.

Beautiful examples of these were shown, with explanations of the method in decoration, coloring and glaze. Notable among the porcelains, are the early Celadous, the Flambe's and the White Fokien ware, any one of which, will be hard to rival in museum or private collections.

Following the porcelains, the carvings in jade and other hardstones were exhibited, and as climax to all, the remarkable assembly of bronzes, dating back to the Chou dynasty. Many beautiful examples of the Han classic symplicity were shown, with a member from the Tang and Sung periods, of temple utensils, vases, and articles exhumed from the tombs.

Mr. Dolgarouckoff's is the fourth private collection opened generously to the fortunate members of the Literary Department. A second group is to be entertained later by the same gentleman. Much regret is expressed, at the small number who may be included in these delightful expeditions. Lack of space in the collectors' rooms, and not lack of generous welcome, is responsible for the limitation in number. The boundless hospitality of the hosts, upon each of these visits, has been a memorable feature of the occasions.

On Saturday, November 15 H. E. Mr. Shen Tun-ho opened his home to receive twenty members of the Literary Department of the American Woman's Club to view his collections of porcelain. These porcelains are in several groups; the one of immediate interest being the reproductions of old imperial porcelains, which won for China the Grand Prize at the late Panama Exposition. Japan ranking second, and Austro-Hungary third. Mr. Shen displayed with pride the medals attesting this fact.

He explained the process of securing the imperial treasures as patterns, the ruby color and other ingredients necessary to imitate the decoration, and the supervision of work among the potters of Kentechin, which were the old Royal Potteries. Cabinets of old porcelains were also displayed. A third collection of old porcelain pictures, inset in backgrounds of lacquer, were novel to nearly all the guests.

Not content with this lavish entertainment in Art, the host served various Chinese delicacies and confections at a bounteous tea-table to his delighted guests.

POINCAIRE RETURNS FROM ENGLAND VISIT

President Of France Declares Community Of Spirit Has Followed War

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, November 15.—President and Madame Poincare returned to France from England yesterday, taking the passenger steamer Rouen from Dover to Calais, where they were saluted by the Mayor. Before leaving for Paris M. Poincare handed the Mayor 1,500 francs for the poor of Calais. The Presidential train reached the Gare Du Nord at Paris at 4:30 p.m. The President, who was received on the platform by M. Stephen Pichon, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and M. Claveille, Minister of Public Works, proceeded immediately to the Elysee.

On leaving English soil President Poincare telegraphed to King George renewing his thanks for the cordial reception accorded to Madame Poincare and himself in England and adding that he was deeply touched by the warm sympathy displayed towards France by the entire population. "Comradeship in arms," he said, "has now been transformed into community of spirit."

King George replied assuring M. Poincare that the welcome accorded to him in England was a testimony of the affection of the British nation, not only for M. Poincare personally, but for the whole of France. King George added that he cordially endorsed M. Poincare's statement that the community of spirit now existing between the two peoples was the outcome of comradeship in arms on the battlefields.

SENDS BACK MESSAGE

Paris, November 15 (via Lyons and Koukazai).—M. Poincare who returned to Paris yesterday from Glasgow handed Reuter's representative an autograph message to the British people which concluded with the following words: "Our two nations say to their Governments, we do not want ever to separate."

Paris, Nov. 11.—The French public are delighted at President Poincare's reception in England. They say that no sovereign was ever welcomed with such enthusiasm and cordiality.

It is pointed out that the toasts exchanged at the banquet at Buckingham Palace showed clearly that a new bond links France and Great Britain, after the terrible ordeal of war, a bond based on real agreement, close friendship and the same political and economical ideals.

"Raw Cotton: The sale was reported of two hundred bales of good Bengal cotton at forty dollars per picul. The market has since firmed up considerably."

London, Nov. 13.—It is authoritatively stated that in West Russia General Judenitch has averted the extreme danger to which he was exposed, but it must be recognised that his second attack on Petrograd this year has failed.

In South Russia, it is stated, the Bolshevik counter-offensive along the whole two hundred mile front is meeting with considerable success in many regions, although in some places the Volunteers have repelled the attacks and are advancing.

General Denikin reports large captures of men and material, but the Bolsheviks are endeavoring to compensate for their losses by continually pouring in troops from elsewhere.

SILVER PRICE HELD UP BY DEMAND IN CHINA

British Government Urged To Withdraw Coins And Issue Bills

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 11.—The rise in the cash price of silver to 68¾ pence yesterday was due to the demand from China. It is pointed out that the rise in the forward price to 67 pence means that it is worth while for dealers to take steps to encourage melting down coin and plate in order to fill their orders. It appears that melting down plate has already begun.

The Manchester Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution urging the Government, in view of the abnormally high cost of silver and shortage of copper coins, to withdraw from circulation all the coins of higher value than the florin, employing if necessary five shilling notes to augment the reduced number of silver coins remaining in circulation, and to use nickel instead of silver for all new coins, hereafter required to represent values between a penny and a shilling.

ANOTHER PROPOSAL

London, Nov. 13.—With a view to improving American Exchange it has been suggested that the Government should allow free export of gold, and raise the bank rate, but it is considered unlikely that this will be done. It is understood that a more effective method of checking speculation had been devised, whereby the banks will refuse to lend money for speculative purposes, especially in commodities, in order to prevent a speculator holding up stocks of foodstuffs and other necessaries with a view to obtaining higher prices.

The recent decline in Government stocks is attributed to speculators selling them because they cannot borrow on them.

The Board of Trade announces that it will grant a general license permitting issues of capital. This is equivalent to the removal of all restrictions on capital issues and is expected to facilitate British enterprise abroad and the development of industries formerly in enemy hands.

Ministry Of Education Has New Plan To Simplify Oriental Writing

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, November 13.—The Ministry of Education has for some months been experimenting with a system of Chinese shorthand writing, known as the Chinese Written Phonetic, which is expected to simplify reading and writing in Chinese enormously and ultimately be accepted as the recognised script of the people. Behind the Ministry of Education in the movement are Wang Ta, the Mayor of Peking, Su Suh, one of the leading professors at the Government University, and all the foreign missionary societies.

All the teachers of the North China Union Language School have taken a course in the new written phonetic, and many of Peking's schools, including the day school at the Y. M. C. A., are giving regular courses in it to numbers of pupils. Those who have taken the course say that the entire field covered by it can be learned by ten days' hard work and that the benefits derived from it are great, it taking only half the time to write a letter or an article in the phonetic that is required for writing the same material in the customary characters.

An attempt is now being made to popularise the written phonetic by persuading a number of Peking's leading newspapers to publish one or two articles a day in this script; and it is understood that the Yi Shih Pao and the Ming Pao will head the newspaper campaign in this direction. Other newspapers here have likewise signified their intention of giving the new script a trial, and an effort will shortly be made to introduce it into the press of Tientsin and Shanghai.

The main significance of the new plan is that it will simplify the Chinese character and make a knowledge of ordinary reading and writing accessible to all, just as the 54 letter alphabet has put education within the reach of the entire Japanese people. The effect of this on a population of which two percent is at present literate is inconceivable; and the supporters of the written phonetic are confident that they are ushering in the mental and moral awakening of the Chinese people.

B.W.W.A. Will Continue, Final Decision At Meeting

Lady de Sausmarez Is Presented With Ring, Token Of Five Years' Devotion Of War Duties

Decision was reached definitely at the meeting of the British Women's Work Association yesterday that the society in China shall not cease but shall be perpetuated in some memorial requiring the efforts and attention of the members. Three specific proposals for the memorial were made, all of which were referred to the committee for future action by the Association.

The meeting, which comfortably filled Messrs. Maitland and Company's large auction room, closed with a presentation to Lady de Sausmarez, president of the Association, of a diamond and sapphire ring in recognition of her five years of tireless energy on behalf of the society. She was also given an illuminated address bearing the autographed signatures of the donors.

PLAN FOR FUTURE

The session was opened by Lady de Sausmarez at 5:30. After outlining the scope of the work accomplished she pointed out the difficulties in scant funds and exhausted clothing materials to continuing along the old lines. This meeting, she said, was to determine the future policy.

She then called to the chair, Sir Havilland de Sausmarez who presided.

The resolution from the committee to continue the work in the form of a memorial was the first business proposed and carried. Then came a resolution calling for suspension of Association activities in Siberia. This, however, was promptly amended by a proposal from Mrs. Clear, that subscriptions be invited to enable the Association to send supplies to assist the refugees in Siberia during the winter.

Two officers from the British Military Mission in Siberia were present at the meeting and supported the suggestion by graphically depicting the conditions among the people as they saw them.

LADIES AIDED SOLDIERS

Colonel Shuttleworth, the first speaker, began by thanking the ladies for the clothing and articles of comfort sent the British soldiers. Many men had come direct from other fronts, himself from Mesopotamia, with only the dilapidated units they had when they first saw service. What the British women of Shanghai did for them was a very real help, he said.

Regarding Russian conditions, he said he was in Ekaterinburg when that city was evacuated and left to the Bolshevists. He saw thousands upon thousands of people streaming out of the city, with nothing more than what they could carry in small bundles. Few could get railway accommodations; the most of them walked. Those people for the most part are living now crowded into freight cars, he said, twenty or thirty to each small car. They are getting food from the Russian Government but there is no clothing and blankets are not to be had.

SUPPLIES FOR SIBERIA

Supplies sent from here are now received by the British Red Cross Committee in Vladivostok. There they are sorted in big warehouses and sent out in sealed trains paid for by the British Government, operated by Russians under British supervision.

At Omsk, or Irkutsk as the terminal probably now is, they are again in competent hands for distribution.

Captain Marryat endorsed what Colonel Shuttleworth had said, except that he declared refugee conditions were now much worse than when the Colonel left. He declared that clothing and not food is what is needed most urgently in Siberia this winter. The amended resolution to discontinue Siberian work for British soldiers and, instead, ask subscriptions to help refugees in Siberia carried.

On the question of what sort of memorial should be adopted two proposals received much attention. The first to endow hospital beds and a convalescent fund for the British who took part in the war, the second, to establish a club in Shanghai for working women. No vote was taken, the matter being left for the Committee to investigate and report at a later meeting.

FAVORS HOSPITAL PLAN

Major A. H. Hilton-Johnson, followed by Major Manners, spoke for the hospital and convalescent fund proposal. Major Hilton-Johnson, as president of the United Services Association, described the urgent need that many returned service men have already come into in Shanghai.

No less than 100 such men in the short time that soldiers have been returning have been helped. He recalled the statement of Field Marshall Haig upon his encountering destitute war heroes in the streets of London unable to find work. The beds in the hospital, one for men and one for women who took part in the war, while it would not be much, would be in the right direction he thought.

Dean Walker declared that the community must solve the problem of the returned soldier and take care of him, but as a memorial for the B.W.W.A. he considered the residential club for working British women in Shanghai more suitable. Mr. O. M. Green, following up the same argument, called attention to the lack of residential accommodations for the working woman. Shanghai is losing able women workers not because wages are too low but because of uncomfortable and unsocial home surroundings that could be remedied by this Club, he said.

PRESENTATION MADE

Both schemes as well as that for a charitable endowment in England, suggested by the Queen were referred for future action.

The presentation was made by Mrs. A. S. Brand, the vice-president. She was preceded by the British Consul-General Mr. Jamieson, who told something of the sacrifices Lady de Sausmarez had made. He named a group of British women each of whom had contributed largely to the great success of the B.W.W.A. and had won in turn the thanks and gratitude of soldiers living and dead, of the Queen, the Government and now of the community.

Lady de Sausmarez, replying, said that she would soon be leaving Shanghai but that she would take the ring and prize it always as her most pleasant remembrance of 15 years spent here.

CHURCHES TO CONFER ON LABORERS' FUTURE

Rev. H. Westnidge Tells Of Problem Coming When Men Return Home

At the prayer meeting of the Shanghai Missionary Association held in Union Church Hall last night, the subject of Chinese laborers returning from France was considered. An address was given by Rev. H. Westnidge, a missionary of the China Inland Mission located at Suifu, Szechuen. Two years ago Mr. Westnidge left his post for furlough in England and very shortly was called upon to go to France as a Y.M.C.A. secretary with the Chinese Labor Corps. His work was among the laborers recruited for the British service.

There were 94,000 of these men working at trench digging, in munition factories, and in transport service. Y.M.C.A. huts were established for them, in which work was conducted by nearly one hundred Chinese recruited from the American and British Universities and from China. These huts provided recreation and useful occupation for the men when off duty.

Moving pictures, educational classes, games and Chinese music were made use of. Among the laborers there was found a small percentage who could read and write. These were organised to read papers to the others and to write their letters home. Savings were received and deposited in France or transmitted to families as desired. Religious services were conducted.

CHURCHES MAKE PLANS

Upon his return from France, Mr. Westnidge made a visit to Tsinanfu and Tientsin to help the churches in their plans for the laborers on their return to China. He reported that 20,000 of them have already landed at Tsingtau and that the others are expected at the rate of 10,000 to 15,000 each month until all are back.

This large number of men pouring back into China all before March 1, and returning to their homes, offers a great opportunity to the Christian Church. Some of them have been helped by their experiences abroad, others have seriously deteriorated; all have seen the worst rather than the best of the life of the West. Some come back with appreciation of the service they received from the Church through the Y.M.C.A., others return with hostility toward all Western people and institutions.

TO HOLD CONFERENCE

Mr. Westnidge reported that reception work is being conducted for these laborers at Weihsien, Chotsian and Tsinan. A committee representing the various churches has been organised with a Chinese secretary, Mr. L. T. Chen in charge of the activities.

To deal at all adequately with this opportunity, Mr. Westnidge urged that several missionaries and a score of strong Chinese workers should be assigned for at least one year to work among these men, in order to make use of the good impressions and to repair the wastage among them.

A conference is to be held in Shanghai within the next few days to plan more definitely for meeting this opportunity.

ENVOY FOR HOTELS HERE FROM STATES ON GREETING TOUR

Chester A. Doyle To Talk Shop With Managers Of Local Hostelries

NEARLY CIRCLES GLOBE

Emmissary Brings Greetings From Managers Of Chain Of American Inns

Chester A. Doyle is on a 38,000-mile hand-shaking trip that covers three continents and ten countries. He landed in Shanghai yesterday with his nine trunks—six of them full of advertising material that he is distributing on the tour that he is making in the interest of the five biggest hotels in the world, The Biltmore, Commodore, Belmont, Manhattan, Ansonia and Murray Hill of New York. He also represents the St. Francis hotel of San Francisco.

He has the only job of its kind in existence—his instructions are to "shake hands and tell the world about the best hotels in it." And when he completes the tour and after he meets and greets every hotel proprietor in the Far East, shakes hands and talks a bit of shop, he's going to return to Honolulu where he will again be at "Nikko" to greet travelers, show them the town—and then wire ahead to one of the chain of hotels for reservations.

GREETINGS TO THE EAST

Doyle's tour is the result of a desire expressed by Managers James E. McE. Bowman, James E. Wood and Thomas Colman, three of America's bestknown hotel men. They wanted to extend greetings to hotel managers in the Far East for they realised that the Far East had tremendous travel possibilities.

They agreed on Doyle, who had been entertaining travelers in Honolulu for the last thirty years; he landed there when Hawaii had a monarchial government. And he had spent many years in Japan—speaks Japanese fluently. But the big idea was that Doyle knows nearly everyone that ever passed through Honolulu because he has entertained them. He is an old railroad man, too, and was in the steamship game. So Doyle's nine trunks were packed with clothes and advertising material and he started on the trip that will take him nearly around the world.

He crossed the United States and then went to Honolulu. Japan was the next stop. Through Korea to Peking, from there to Tsingtau and finally to Shanghai he has told his story.

A JOURNEY AHEAD

While here Mr. Doyle is stopping at the Astor House but he will meet all the hotel proprietors in town before leaving for Manila. After a stay in Manila and the Philippines, Doyle goes to Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Malacca, Bangkok, Rangoon, Calcutta, across India to Bombay, Colombo, Java, Freemantle, Port Pirie, Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney, Brisbane, Auckland, Wellington, Tahiti, San Francisco and New York.

To make the trip he received a year's leave of absence from the United States Government. He acts as Japanese interpreter for the Government in the territory of Hawaii. Incidentally he is known all over the Far East as "the jester of Hawaii."

At his famous home, "Nikko," he has entertained princes and paupers, priests and poets, players and painters. Ambassadors and chorus girls have faced scholars, skippers and society folk across the board at "Nikko."

He has had all sorts of experiences and admits that he was arrested once. This happened a few weeks ago at Shimonoseki.

ONLY SHAKES HANDS

With his nine trunks he landed at the hotel. The clerk tossed a pen across the counter and the globe-trotting hand shaker wrote "Chester A. Doyle; residence, St. Francis Hotel; occupation—Go Get 'em."

Because he admitted that going out and getting 'em was his business, Doyle was soon under the surveillance of Japanese detectives. Yes, he was arrested and taken to the police station where the flatfoot told the sergeant all about it.

But Doyle understands Japanese as well as he does English and when the sergeant heard the copper's tale, Doyle started in. He told the man behind the desk what his occupation meant. "There are 7,800 rooms in five hotels in New York and 1,500 in the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco," he said. "Whenever the rooms are empty the managers send me out to get occupants." That settled it. There were invitations to dinner and now there are two less "fly cops" in Shimonoseki than there were.

Doyle's mission is unique. He comes to the East selling nothing. His business is to shake hands—and life is just one hand shake after another with Chester A.

Prince Of Wales Stops At American Capitol To Greet Wilsons

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, November 11.—The Prince of Wales called at the White House today and had a conversation with Mrs. and Miss Wilson. The Prince expects to see the President the day after tomorrow.

In an address to the National Press Club the Prince of Wales greeted the American people, and expressed his pleasure at visiting the United States, particularly after meeting the American forces in Europe and realising American efforts in the war.

Washington, November 12.—The Prince of Wales in the course of a speech at an official banquet given in his honor last night very sympathetically referred to the illness of President Wilson, who, he said, was revered far beyond the shores of America. His Royal Highness dwelt upon the similarity in sentiments and democratic ideals of the five sister nations forming the British Empire and the United States. Referring to the identity of aims of the Canadian and United States systems of Government, he emphasised that the spirit of harmony in which these nations lived side by side was a living example of the great principles for which the Allies had sacrificed their best in the war.

INJUNCTION AGAINST BROTHER ASKED BY H. RAKUSEN DENIED

Interim Order In Contest Over Business Here Refused By British Court

PARTNERSHIP DISPUTED

Control Of Firm, Possession Of Books And Other Points Are Involved

A motion for an interim injunction of H. Rakusen by his attorney, Mr. Morris Rothschild, against his brother, Mr. S. Rakusen, of Messrs. H. Rakusen and Co., was refused yesterday in the British Supreme Court before Judge Sir Havilland de Sausmarez. Mr. W. Strafford Levinson was counsel for the defendant, while Mr. J. H. Teesdale represented the plaintiff. The case arose out of an alleged partnership between the two brothers.

The motion was for an injuction against S. Rakusen restraining him and his representatives from entering the premises of, or interferring with the business of H. Rakusen and Co., 42 Whangpoo Road, of which plaintiff says he is the sole partner. Other claims were for the delivery by S. Rakusen to his brother of all the property of the firm, and an account of all business and transactions done by the defendant from the time when he assumed the managership of the firm to the time of judgment. The payment of all balances found due to the plaintiff or his firm as well as $3,000 as damages and court costs was also asked.

DISPUTE OVER FIRM

Mr. Teesdale read an affidavit in support of the motion from Mr. Morriss Rothschild and said that the matter was a dispute in regard to a certain business in Shanghai. H. Rakusen, he said started the firm in 1913 and had financed it ever since. Counsel further stated, in reply to the Judge, that he had also the power of attorney on affidavit: plaintiff, who is in England, telegraphed this notification that he had substituted Rothschild, and subsequently the power of attorney arrived. S. Rakusen, he said, arrived in August this year, demanded possession, was refused and walked in and there remained. Defendant, said Mr. Teesdale, has filed suit against one Mr. T. C. Britton, who was placed in the business by his client.

In further answer to Sir Havilland, counsel said that his client was the originator of the firm. There could be no question that he was the owner of the firm.

LETTERS ARE READ

Mr. Levinson read extracts from three letters between the two brothers and said he had filed an affidavit, in which defendant said that he had been partner for many years, that he had conducted the business in Shanghai since 1914 and that just now he was the tenant of the premises at Whangpoo Road from Messrs. E. D. Sassoon and Co.

Counsel said that apparently the brothers had signed a partnership agreement. He has abundant proof of that partnership, existing in England and also the letters that counsel read showed that there was a partnership in China too. No question of any dissolution of partnership has been raised. Defendant has been home and evidently, the moment he left England plaintiff authorised Rothschild to take possession of the premises.

After further discussion, Sir Havilland said that all he could do was to deal with the concrete matter before him. At the present time, it seemed to him, the reasonable course was that the agent of the plaintiff should have proper access to the books and that the defendant on having restored to him the whole of the books take no further steps in the action commenced in the U. S. Court and that on those terms he should have control of the partnership business pending trial of the action. He would refuse the motion with regard to the interim injunction.

Thanksgiving Day Program Discussed

American Thanksgiving day services will be held at five o'clock on the afternoon of November 27 in the Union Church if that may be procured. Such was the decision of the meeting of those interested held last evening in the American Consulate-General. Mr. Edwin S. Cunningham, Consul-General, presided.

The meeting voted to appoint a committee of four to make the arrangements. Dr. McCracken was chosen as its head, the other members are Mr. J. B. Powell, and representatives of the American Association of China and the American Woman's Club.

It is probable that the American Company, S.V.C., will take part and it was arranged at the meeting last night that members of the woman's club, assisted by navy men, will take charge of decorations for the Church.

PARTY POLICY STATED BY BRITISH PREMIER

Election Address To Women Unionists Delivered By Bonar Law

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 13.—Coincident with four pending bye-elections at Chester-le-Street, South Croydon, Thanet and Plymouth, Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Bonar Law have made pronouncements of policy.

The Prime Minister in reply to a published letter from the Liberal candidate at Plymouth, who asked where the Premier stood as regards Liberalism, says that the policy of renewing party strife before the world's unrest has settled down and when national unity is necessary to restore the wastage of the war, would be contrary alike to Liberal principles and national interests. He declares that the great program of progressive democratic legislation which the Government has carried out, including the Franchise Act, the Education Bill and the Minimum Agricultural Wage Bill can favorably compare with the record of any Government.

It is noteworthy that the Prime Minister recently sent a message to Lady Astor, Coalition Candidate at Plymouth, wishing her success.

Mr. Bonar Law addressing a meeting of Women Unionists at Westminster said that he had been asked why he did not define a policy for Unionists, but when Unionists had joined the Coalition they had lost the right to have their own policy. Their policy was firstly to support the Coalition, but that did not meant the abolition of the Unionist Party which was never more necessary or more united than now. Mr. Bonar Law eulogised the record of the Government pointing out, in reply to the charge of extravagance, that the present year must be financially treated as a year of war, for most of the expenditure was directly due to the war.

He said that big reductions of expenditure were only possible by putting down the fighting forces. He predicted that before many months critics would abuse the Government for leaving the country undefended. We had proved that we were strong enough to set the example in the reduction of armaments, and he believed that the other great nations would follow Great Britain's example.

The policy of Unionists, concluded Mr. Bonar Law, was to improve the condition of the masses on which point Mr. Lloyd George absolutely agreed Mr. Bonar Law added that the cohesion of the Coalition was as strong as ever.

Arrival Of Minister For England Is Marked With Receptions

(China Press Correspondence)

Tsinan, Shantung Province, Nov. 13.—The visit of the British minister to Tsinan has been the occasion for a large number of festive occasions among the British community of Tsinan, and among local official circles. A large general reception was held yesterday at the British consulate. This was preceeded by a big dinner, at which Sir John Jordon was the guest of the military governor.

The guests included the entire British community, and representatives of the Shantung officials. Today the Civil Governor followed with a similar reception and dinner, the guests again including the British community.

The remainder of the day was occupied with a detailed inspection of the campus and buildings of the Shantung Christian University. The educational undertakings of the Shantung Christian University represent the most extensive efforts in higher education that are being made by British efforts in China outside of Hongkong. The university is unique as representing the result of joint American and British efforts.

The visit of the British minister coming at this time is looked upon as significant. Sir John Jordan will leave immediately to visit Tsingtau.

WILMINGTON ELEVEN DEFEATS U.S.S. ELCANO

Karlander And Keaton Stars Of 19-0 Win; Lighter Elcano Team Outplayed

With Keaton and Karlander starring in the backfield, the U.S.S. Wilmington football eleven defeated the team from the U.S.S. Elcano at the Race Course yesterday afternoon by a score of 19-0. The Wilmington crew scored in the first, second and last quarters.

The Elcano eleven was outweighed and outplayed, the Wilmington using a greater variety of plays and showing results of hard practice. In Keaton the Wilmington has a star quarter who knows how to run a team and is a good man in a broken field. Karlander was the classiest performer of the teams.

Chelock and Lawler are nifty ends and the line is fairly fast. Bailey, Kolander, Harris and Johnson played good football for the losers.

The summary:

Wilmington		Elcano
Creslock	le	Henderson
Johnson	lt	Harris
McMaster	lg	Hunter
Flynn	c	Lyons
Welty	rg	Carter
Maxwell	rt	Johnson
Lawler	re	Sutter
Keeton	qb	Chelock
Miller	lhb	Galvin
Wall	rhb	Bailey
Karlander	fb	Kolander

Touchdowns—Karlander, 2; Keeton. Goal from touchdown—Karlander, Vaughan and Brunner. Four ten-minute periods.

Chicago White Sox Again Defeated By Cincinnati Reds

National Leaguers Take Second Game Of Series, 4 to 2

Williams' Wildness Is Costly All Ohio Town's Runs Being Started On Passes; Winners Outhit

Below is the story of the second game of the world's series for baseball supremacy, in which the Cincinnati Reds repeated their victory of October 1 and threw a scare into the Chicago White Sox. The third game will be described in tomorrow's issue of THE CHINA PRESS.

Cincinnati, October 2.—Playing with the same dogged determination which has made them a dangerous adversary all season, the Cincinnati Reds subdued the Chicago White Sox today, winning the second sensational clash of the world series by a score of 4 to 2. Redland Field was again jammed to the last bit of standing room, but the crowd this afternoon didn't soar into the realm of joy as it did the opening game. Thrills and surprises have come to the natives so much of late that nerve power is at a low ebb and their voices were husky.

The White Sox put up a spunkier fight this afternoon and looked much better than they did Wednesday. Claude Williams, Gleason's best left hander, pitched far better ball than Slim Sallee in the matter of hits, but the Chicago southpaw was seized with an alarming attack of wildness in the fourth inning, and it was just at this moment that the Reds flared up and concentrated their vicous batting attack just long enough to slash over three runs and win the game.

Sallee, the former New Yorker would have found himself in a bad pickle if it hadn't been for the wonderful support which the Reds gave him in the pinches. "Sal" was in trouble often. The Sox clubbed him for ten hits, two of them two-baggers, but every time a possible Chicago run loomed up in the offing, Moran's lads closed up airtight and locked the way to the plate.

ERRORS HELP CHICAGO

The two runs which decorate Chicago's end of the score came unexpectedly in the seventh inning as a result of an atrociously wild throw by Earle Neale, the Reds' right fielder. He tried to make a toss to second after little Ray Schalk had singled with Risberg on first. This untamed peg, wafted serenely through second base and rolled across left field to the temporary fence which bars the stands in front of the pavilion seats from the foul line. By the time the ball had been retrieved Risbery and Schalk were both over the pan. If it had not been for that error it is very likely that the Sox would have been humiliatingly whitewashed.

Nothing short of winning the world's series will pacify Redland fans now. When this baseball circus started they would have been satisfied with the winning of a game or so, but now their baseball madness has reached the stage where the Queen City of the West will never get back to normal life again until the calico which goes with the baseball championship of the whole universe flutters over Garry Herrmann's baseball bailiwick.

The most highly illuminated play of today's game was a glittering grab by Eddie Roush when he pulled down Hap Felsch's life sized smash in the eighth inning Weaver had doubled at this momentous occasion and was presented with a free ticket to third when the veteran Sallee forgot himself and unraveled a balk, which is a rare thing in a big game. With Weaver straining at the leash at third and two gone Felsch, who had twice laid down sacrifice hits, welcomed this occasion to take a healthy swing at the ball.

Hap hit it squarely on the nose and the ball sailed high and far in the general direction of the center field battlement. Roush took one peek at the ball, then turned and ran for the fence. As he galloped along with his back to the ball it seemed as if the little white object was going to crash against the green painted center field fence.

When Weaver had crossed the plate and Felsch was rounding second base on his hilarious gallop, Roush turned suddenly. He did this by intuition, for it was impossible for him to see where the ball was, as there are no eyes in the back of his head. As he twisted quickly about, both hands reached skyward and he corraled the ball just as it was about to whistle over his roof. Up to this time the fans were settled back comfortably in their seats and had come to the conclusion that nothing more could happen in this series to flicker the magnetic spark of their jagged nerves.

FANDOM CUTS LOOSE

A hair raising catch of this kind, however, was much too much to allow to pass unnoticed, so once more the human caldron began to seethe and boil. Cheers and shouts rose from tired throats, cow bells, rattlers, fish horns, and whistles rent the air. The deafening noise bounded against the hill sides of Clifton and came echoing back again.

Not satisfied with that great play at the expense of Felsh, Heinie Groh made a play in the eighth with Jackson at second which again robbed the White Sox center fielder of a chance for glory. Felsh slammed a hopper down at Heinie so hard that it almost knocked him over. It was then the little third basemen, who is the idol of Redland, showed his uncanny ability at fielding. He got squarely in front of the man-killing drive, knocked it down and the ball splashed away toward the pitcher's boy. Heinie was after it in a jiffy and, making a remarkable recovery, he threw Felsh out at first for the third out.

This is a sample of the kind of playing the Reds are doing in this series. Groh made this play with a finger which is just convalescing from a recent splintered bone. The second finger of his throwing hand is all dressed up in tape.

The Sox have got to travel at a new high-speed gait to beat that kind of ball playing. The Reds got only four hits off Lefty Williams. He had everything but control, and his control was so hopelessly bad that every Cincinnati runner who scored got to first base on a pass. Williams established himself as the world's series Santa Claus of all times. His philanthrophy was unbounded, and if he had money to distribute instead of bases on balls he would probably flood the country with public libraries. When Williams gets back to Chicago, they probably will appoint him as head of the Department of Charities. It seemed cruel to the other White Sox players to stand idly by and watch their star southpaw hand the Reds the game on a silver salver. When the epitaph of Williams is written, it will have to be admitted that Lefty Williams was a liberal guy when he had it.

KOPF'S HIT WINS GAME

Williams gave six bases on balls and allowed four hits. One of these was a humdinger. The eminent author of it was William Lawrence Kopf, the former Fordham College player from New Britain, Conn. In that fitful fourth inning, after Williams had filled almost every vacant apartment on the lot, Larry pumpeled a triple between Felsh and Jackson, the ball rolling to the temporary fence in left center. Two runs trickled over with Kopf's huge jolt and from that moment Cincinnati had the game boxed, sealed, and ready for storage.

Miss Opportunity carried on a shocking flirtation with the White Sox all afternoon. She coyly winked at them, nodded her head, pouted her lips, and smiled. Like a bashful country pumpkin the Sox stubbornly refused to be vamped. Miss Opportunity was turned down cold, and was so much hurt by the inattention that she shifted her wiles toward the Reds. They gave her a chance.

The splendid opportunities which the Chicago Club had, and overlooked, were numerous. In the second, Joe Jackson's bat was unlimited. He smacked a double to center. Felsh sent him to third with a sacrifice, but Gandil and Risberg, the next two White Sox batsmen up, didn't give Jackson a tumble. They went out promptly and left Joe waiting at the church.

The fourth inning has become a chapter of intense interest of many world's series, and so it was today. The fourth inning for Cincinnati tells the story of the spendthrift Williams. Up to the fourth the Reds hadn't made a single hit and only one runner had reached first. That was Roush, in the second, and he walked, only to fall into the meshes of a double play, when on a hit-and-run play Louis Baird Duncan slammed a liner at Eddie Collins and Roush was doubled up.

BASES ON BALLS COSTLY

Rath first faced Williams in the fourth. The lefthander seemed to forget the home plate at Redland Field was in this city, or in Hamilton County, or even in the State of Ohio. He gave Rath a pass, and Jake Daubert sent the runner to second with a sacrifice. The surprise of this play was that Williams was able to get the ball close enough to the plate for Daubert to make a sacrifice. With Groh up, Lefty again fell into his wild dissipation and gave Heinie a walk. Roush was up next. He thumped a single to center which shoved Rath home with the first run of the game. Groh scampered to third. Duncan was the next recipient of the generosity of Williams, and he walked on four balls. Such untold extravagance was shocking.

No sailor ashore after a six months' cruise was ever more generous than Williams was in this inning. It was at this point that Larry Kopf came to the bat. Larry gave the ball a dizzy ride. He sent it over the hills and far away, and when Felsch had finished chasing it he found it nestling snugly against the temporary fence in left center. In the meantime Groh and Duncan had galloped home and the crowd was fit to be tied.

Then, and not until then, after the horse had wandered away did Williams think it necessary to lock the barn door. Neale rolled a grounder at Eddie Collins and was thrown out at first for the third out.

You'd think that would have been a lesson for Williams, and that he would have profited by his bitter experience and would have tried to lead a better and a more upright life. Yes, neighbors you'd think so. But that isn't the way of left-handers. They are incorrigible folks, left handers. No one ever knows when and where they will spill the beans.

Along came the sixth inning, and Williams felt the wild spell coming over him again. He gave Roush a pass. Eddie went to second on Duncan's sacrifice. Kopf lofted a foul fly to Weaver, and Earle Neale cudgeled a single to left which sent Roush home with the fourth and last run for the Reds.

Sallee, with brotherly aid from his clubmates, extricated himself from a deep excavation in the Chicago half of the fourth inning. The Sox had a whole mess of runs laid out before them in this session, but they refused to indulge.

SOX OVERLOOKED CHANCE

Buck Weaver opened the inning with a single to center and he went to second when Jackson ripped a single to left. Felsch laid down as neat a bunt as you would care to see and sacrificed the two Sox runners to third and second. What greater chance could the Sox ask for than that?

Chick Gandil tried hard to crack a hit to right field, but Jake Daubert ambled over in front of the drive and he whipped the ball to Bill Rariden at the plate, exterminating Weaver at the platter. Risberg plastered one of those tantalising pops behind first which would have dropped safely for a Texas League ninety-nine times out of a hundred, but this time Daubert happened to shift over that way. He was out of position when he went after the ball, and if he hadn't been he never would have nabbed it. He got it amid a roar of approval. It was the third out and Sallee was saved.

It was in the sixth that Sallee was again saved from a cloud of embarrassment. Eddie Collins opened the inning with a liner right into Kopf's hand. Weaver soaked a double between Roush and Duncan and went to third when the Sheriff of Higginsport Ohio, perpetrated a balk. Umpire Evans, behind the bat, waving Buck to go to third.

Here was the finest layout that Joe Jackson had met up with Joe waved his bat savagely at Sallee then did something for which he should be thoroughly ashamed. He was old enough to know better, but that didn't prevent Joe from striking out.

ROUSH'S CATCH SAVES GAME

Then came Happy Felsch, who did his best to make up for Jackson's short comings. He whaled a terrific drive to center which would have cashed in if anybody but the shadowy Eddie Roush had been in center field. You would have mortgaged the farm that Eddie would never get on speaking terms with the ball. Eddie dashed back several yards at high speed and made an unbelievable catch, which ended that dangerous session for Sallee.

It was in the seventh that the White Sox saved themselves from the humiliation of a whitewash. Gandil went out, Daubert to Sallee, and Risberg cracked a single to left. Ray Schalk spanked a single to right which Neale intercepted and attempted to make a hurried throw to second. The ball chased wildly past Rath, Kopf, and Groh and rolled over to the fence back of the left field foul line, giving Risberg and Schalk plenty of time to get home. Sallee was mad about that mishap and fanned Williams.

There was a slight break in the Reds' defense in the eighth. After two were out Jackson sent a whizzing grounder between first and second. Daubert going to knock down the ball. Jackson had the ball easily beaten, but Daubert made a throw to Sallee, who covered first. It was a sad throw and rolled to the Reds' bench, Jackson going to second. There he stuck, for it was then that Felsch drove his terrific smash to Groh which almost carried the little third baseman out of the park. Quickly recovering the ball he tossed the runner out at first and another White Sox chance was gone forever.

There was still a little ginger left in the White Sox in their half of the ninth. Gandil singled to center, but the break again came for the Reds, for Risberg hit into another double-play, Schalk sho a single to center, and McMullin was called in as a pinch-hitter Rath tossed him out at first and it was all over.

BERNE AND MASKED MAN WILL WRESTLE THURSDAY

First Class Bout Is Promised When Matmen Meet At Olympic Theater

Shanghai will be given a real treat of first class wrestling Thursday night at the Olympic when William Berne, Champion catch-as-catch-can wrestler, meets the unknown masked mat artist who thrilled the audience at the Victoria last week. The wrestlers are matched for a purse of $1,200, of which 70 percent will go to the winner.

Berne, with his strong physical construction, strength and agility, is favored for the contest, but the clever and strenuous work of the competitor under cover exhibited at the initial bout may surprise local sportsmen and upset the dope. Anyhow, it promise to be an interesting and lengthy bout and it is said at both camps yesterday that the competitors are training hard for the event.

The unknown will be allowed to retain his mask, and the toehold, originated by Frank Gotch, will probably be barred, to comply with the request of the man of mystery.

Four big preliminaries will feature the program, which begins promptly at 9:15 o'clock.

Booking has begun at Moutrie's.

Hockey Club Meeting

At the meeting of the Shanghai Hockey League held yesterday evening in the Shanghai Rowing Club Mr. W. T. Bertenshaw presided.

Owing to the secretary's absence the report and accounts for the past season had not been printed but the meeting passed a vote of confidence in the incoming committee to attend to the accounts as soon as Mr. Forbes Cale returned. Mr. H. M. Mann was re-elected President of the Association, Mr. Forbes Cale, Secretary and Treasurer, with a committee of eight being the captain and secretary of each of the four hockey organisations in Shanghai.

It was decided at the meeting to leave the entrance fees of the clubs the same as that of last year: $20 per club.

Mr. Bertenshaw spoke of the good prospects for this season and it was suggested by Mr. Fairbairn that all clubs should play at least three matches in the league. After long discussion this was amended and there will be only two rounds, the spare dates at the end of the season to be utilised in a competition for some trophy to be put up by the Association.

In the event of a tie the coming season matches will have to be played again for there is to be no decision on goal averages.

The league authorities request that all who have a knowledge of the rules of hockey turn out in the capacity of referees as the Committee is hard pressed for referees this coming season.

There were present at the meeting representatives of the Harlequin Hockey Club, the Portuguese Hockey Club and the Police Hockey Club, both Foreign and Sikhs.

BRITISH DOMINIONS SEEK COLONY PLAN

Lieutenant - Colonel Amery Tells House Of Commons About Outside Authorities

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 11.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Mr. Gershom Stewart, Lieut.-Col. L. C. M. Amery, Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, stated that in the opinion of Lord Milner and previous Secretaries of State for Colonies it would not be possible without grave injustice to officers of the still larger services of other Colonies and without unduly narrowing the field of selection, to lay down that Civil Service cadets in Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, the Malay States, and Hongkong who had good prospects in the Civil Services of their own Colonies should also have a preferential claim to governorships and similar senior appointments there and elsewhere.

He pointed out that apart from the self-governing Dominions and three military governorships, the number of governorships, and administratorships in the Colonial Service was thirty-five, some of which would afford no financial advantage to officers from the Eastern Colonies. Four of these posts, namely the governorships of Nigeria, Sierra Leone, the Leeward Islands and Weihaiwei were filled by officers who had originally entered the public service as junior officers in the Eastern dependencies, while of the remaining thirty-one, twenty-five were held by officers selected from other branches of the Colonial Service outside the Eastern dependencies mentioned.

SEELY BLAMES SYSTEM FOR HIS RESIGNATION

Sir John Asserts That Present Dual Control Of Air Ministry Is Bad

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 12.—In the House of Commons today General Sir John Seely explained his resignation of the post of Under Secretary of State for Air. He said that his action was not hasty but was due to the unworkableness of the system of dual control, whereby he, instead of the Secretary of State for War, who Air, presided at the Air Council although the only man who could preside at the Council effectively was the Air Minister. He emphasised the point that no personal question was involved but that the whole thing was impossible. The War Office and Ministry, he said, were each whole-time jobs. The present system involved inefficiency, delay and waste. It excluded the Admiralty and made the Air Ministry an annexe of the War Office, which would be inimical to the interests of the country and mean a waste of commercial possibilities and neglect of new powers which the air had given us.

Mr. Bonar Law said that he regretted General Seely's resignation which was due to a difference of opinion with the Government. He promised a discussion of the whole subject, if the House desired.

London, Nov. 11.—In the House of Commons this afternoon General Sir John Seely took his seat on the front opposition bench.

Replying to Captain Wedgwood Benn, Mr. Bonar Law stated that unless legislation were previously enacted, the Home Rule Act would come into operation after the ratification of the last peace treaty. He was not able to state the Government's intentions on the subject at present.

Adequate Transport Urged By Official To Unite Empire

British Government Must Develop Railways In Colonies, He Says

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 12.—Lieut Col. L. C. M. Amery, Under Secretary of State for the Colonies interviewed by the Morning Post, said there was no cause for misgiving with regard to the post-war outlook of the Empire. He believed that Imperial reconstruction would mean setting up a higher standard of living, better housing, public health conditions, education and wages, than any existing today. The Empire before the close of the century should have two hundred million white citizens at a level of prosperity far above that of the mass of the population of the United States today. The welfare of the races for which the Empire was responsible was equally important.

Imperial transport must be developed, Col. Amery went on, and the first task of British shipping should be to provide adequate and abundant transport between every point of the Empire, to be supplemented by Imperial railway development. In this, he said the United Kingdom might profit by the example of the Dominions and strive to apply their standards to railway development in the Crown Colonies and Protectorates.

Col. Amery mentioned that the Dominions and Rhodesia had built a hundred thousand miles of railways, while the Crown Colonies and Protectorates had only built 3,700 miles. The disparity showed that the latter were not properly opened up. All the Dominions should take an active interest in the tropical Empire. The idea of the Empire as a possession of the United Kingdom was obsolete. The Empire was a chain of equal British nations girdling the world.

"Oversea settlement" was equally important; Col. Amery insisted that the word "emigration" should not be used with reference to a citizen of the Empire moving to another part of the Empire. Half the population of Asia was within the British Empire, and therefore Col. Amery declared, there could be no menace to Australia or Canada of the organisation of Asia against their interests, since half the eight thousand million inhabitants of Asia were partners with them in the Empire. Regarding trade preference within the Empire, Col. Amery said his views were so well known that it was not necessary to repeat them.

Remove Capital Of Philippines Inland, Is Plan

Manila Now Believed To Be Open To Attack For Island Seat

Manila, November 6.—A movement to remove the insular capital from Manila to a point further inland which would be more defensible from attack of possible invading forces is under way among government officials and is said to be supported by the weight of opinion in the council of state.

For this reason, it is said, the estimate for a capitol was eliminated from the 1920 budget. It is understood, however, that the estimate for a bureau of posts building was left in the budget as prepared by the department of finance and that this building will be constructed in Manila, the point where the heaviest mails are received.

The exact site for the location of a permanent insular capital has not been decided upon, it is said, but will probably be along the border between Tayabas and Laguna, in a place affording natural defenses and suitable for the implacement of land defenses.

It is not known that plans for the laying out of the proposed capital have actually been drawn but information that has been gathered indicates definitely that the plans will be for a permanent capital worthy of the islands' future as Filipinos want it to be and that the capitol alone will cost several million pesos and require several years in the building.

London, November 11.—The City ve a great welcome to President oincare this morning. The entire ute of the procession to the uildhall was packed with cheer- g crowds. M. Poincare was ibly touched by the warmth of welcome. There was a dense ncourse at the Guildhall includ- g Prince Albert and all the mem- rs of the Government. M. Poin- re replying to the address of elcome recalled the cordiality of reception in 1913 and added at he saw in London a deeper d more urgent desire than ever fore to extend to France the hand friendship.

Following the reception M. oincare was entertained at nchеon at the Guildhall where most distinguished company was thered to meet him.

The Lord Mayor made a felicit- s speech, eulogising the sacrifices the French nation. M. Poincare plying in a magnificent oration rew attention to the sufferings at he enemy's hands of London and aris which during the war had completely symbolised the haracteristics of the British and rench races. The German air aids, he said, had killed 516 ersons and injured 1,570 in ondon, and the same methods of rrorisation had been used against aris. But Germany had been as eceived in London as in Paris. he enemy's attacks had been pposed by unshakeable determina- ion, supported by a firm conviction f national duty.

"England," proceeded M. Poincare, was always guided by principles of air play. Formerly when Great Britain and France were adver- aries they attacked each other ith chivalrous courtesy and had hus learned to respect each other.

"Can we conceive," asked the President, "a more audacious challenge to civilisation and the spirit of the twentieth century han to wage war by night on open towns and bury innocent people in the ruins of their dwellings?

"It is necessary," he declared, "that the peace just signed shall spare to posterity the resumption of the horrors already known. Our two great peoples have powerfully contributed to save righteousness from the ruin with which it was threatened. It remains for them to give it a new life and assure its reign upon earth."

ADDRESS OF KING

London, November 10.—King George, proposing the health of President Poincare at the State Banquet at Buckingham Palace tonight said that he welcomed the opportunity of expressing in person his profound appreciation of the glorious feats performed by the French troops under the splendid leadership of the supreme generalissimo, Marshal Foch.

"Amid all the wonderful features of the war," His Majesty declared, "none made a greater appeal to the hearts of my people than the heroic constancy and chivalrous ardor of France." His Majesty, recalled the successful efforts of his father and one of M. Poincare's predecessors to bring about the Anglo-French Entente, an Entente which had been happily succeeded by a firm and enduring Alliance, cemented and made permanent alike by the sacrifices and victories which they had shared in a war against a stubborn and powerful foe.

In spite of the arduous duties ahead, the King said he was confident that France and the British Empire would carry through the great work of reconstruction in the same spirit of mutual trust and good fellowship which they had exhibited during the war.

"My country," continued His Majesty, "has already given a fresh proof of her devotion to the alliance by signing a promise to come to the aid of France if she is menaced afresh by her old enemy. I pray to Heaven to avert such a calamity and that the League of Nations may ensure the peace of the world and enable all nations to pursue their allotted tasks in tranquility and security." His Majesty said he was confident the glorious destinies of the two nations would proceed together along the paths of peace, firmly united by indissoluble ties and undying memories of common endurance and common triumph.

"Our aspirations," concluded His Majesty, "are identical. Our interests should never conflict. I am unable to contemplate any situation in which we shall not act together is the defense of the high ideals of liberty and justice. The Queen and I are especially glad that Madame Poincare, has been able to accompany you and enable us to welcome you here as our guests."

Changsha Observes Armistice Signing

American And British War Crews Help Celebrate Memorable Day

(China Press Correspondence)

Changsha, Hunan Province, Nov. 11.—The first anniversary of the signing of the armistice was celebrated today on the grounds of the Changsha Recreation Club, on the island opposite the city. A varied program of sports and entertainment was provided by the men from the U.S.S. Monocacy and the British gunboat, Woodlark. The sports began at 2:30 with a three-legged race, which was followed by numerous events such as a wheelbarrow race, obstacle race, horse racing, tug of war and a greased pig hunt. The element of comedy was supplied by a number of men in costume, and by stunts performed by the men from the gunboats. Prizes were presented to the winners of the various events. Ideal weather added to the pleasure of the occasion and enabled nearly all foreigners in port to attend.

DR. CHATLEY TELLS OF RACE PROBLEMS

Points Out To Quest Society Two Effects He Saw From Late War

The two outstanding features of the great war are that it emphasised nationality on the one hand and produced the idea of the League of Nations on the other, according to Dr. Herbert Chatley, who spoke last night before the Quest Society in the Royal Asiatic clubrooms on "Race Prejudice."

After remarking on the gradual growth of internationalism with Buddhism, ancient imperialism, Christianity and modern international humanitarianism and socialism, the speaker called attention to the importance of the subject to people residing in the Far East. The great war had had two effects. It emphasised nationality on the one hand and produced the idea of the League of Nations on the other.

In order to think sanely on the subject one must have a clear idea of what nationality is and when, how and why race prejudice occurs, he said. A sense of race distinction arises from four peculiarities: color, form, institutions and habits. The first two are hereditary whereas the second are primarily cultural.

RACIAL REACTIONS

Ethnology is not an exact science, but history although accurate gives general ideas as to the blood relationship of individuals and peoples. The instincts from which racial reactions arise are partly hereditary and partly impressed from without by the social environment. Reason acts as a check but except in highly developed individuals is powerless to control cumulative mass-suggestion.

After briefly discussing the features of racial heredity, Dr. Chatley alluded to the two main factors which underlie the question, the struggle for existence and the instinct of gregariousness. The impulse of self preservation proceeds in ever widening circles from the individual through the family, the class, the sex, the nation, the race, to animal and even vegetable life, he said. Gregariousness is the expression of the necessity for a wider preservation of life than in the individual alone, and as education proceeds it covers an ever wider and wider field, being only checked by the realisation of the impracticality of maintaining more than a certain extent of living beings.

THE TIME TO DECIDE

Men have now come to the point of having to decide whether or not the more different races of humanity are sufficiently kin to warrant the preservation of all and the devoting of the ineradicable instincts of war to a combat with the inimical features of animal and vegetable life and inanimate nature.

He said that before this becomes possible, the following questions must be considered:

The ignorance of the bulk of the individuals of all nations and the almost complete ignorance of the whole of some nations.

The existing economic rivalry of nations, classes and sexes.

The degree to which by heredity and culture human solidarity can be increased.

The speaker concluded by pointing out the absolute dependence of the whole question upon right education, the adjustment of international trade relations, and the utilisation of scientific discovery to the increase of production.

Tannery Is In Hands Of Japanese, Charge

Hide Guild Asks Chinese Chamber Of Commerce To Make Inquiry Into Deal

Investigation of the report that the Chinese Tannery, known as the Lunghua Tannery and Hide Manufacturing Company, Lunghua, has been sold to a Japanese concern was asked in a letter addressed to the Chinese Chamber of Commerce by the local Hide Guild yesterday.

It has been reported that the tannery has been sold for about Tls. 170,000 and the transfer would take place December 20. The Chamber asks the Peking authorities to stop the negotiations if the sale is contemplated as this transfer of title, it is claimed, would infringe on the industrial development of China and effect the supply of military needs of the Government.

COLONIES LEFT OUT ASSERT THE FRENCH

Not In League Of Nations Like The British, Deputies Complain

CLEMENCEAU'S MAJORITY 37

Premier Blamed For Giving Way Too Much To America, Britain, And Japan

Paris, October 1.—Complaint that France had been slighted in the makeup of the League of Nations because the French colonies were not represented in the League, although each British colony would have a delegate, was expressed by Deputy Augagneur in the debate on the ratification of the Peace Treaty in the Chamber of Deputies today. Dr. Augagneur further criticised the Peace Treaty on the ground that it does not furnish sufficient guarantees for the execution of its terms by Germany.

Deputy Franklin-Bouillon, while disclaiming any intention of bringing any charges against the Allies, blamed Clemenceau for permitting the United States, Great Britain, and Japan to enforce in advance their terms, while France was yet isolated and her colonies forgotten. He said that he was painfully struck by the apparently easy acquiescence of Premier Clemenceau in the possibility that the United States Senate would not ratify the treaty.

He added that without the United States the League of Nations is dead. "I hope that the United States Senate will not inflict upon us such a disillusionment," he added.

Opponents of Premier Clemenceau were jubilant for a few moments in the session of the Chamber last evening when an unofficial count on the vote of confidence he had asked showed 301 votes against the Government and only 262 in its favor. The checking up, however, revealed that there had been a stuffing of the ballot box, the official count showing the adverse vote really to have been only 188, so that the Government's majority, although relatively slight, seemed satisfactory to the Ministry bench.

The chief argument of Deputy Lefevre, in presenting his resolution, was that he was not proposing an amendment to the Peace Treaty but that it was a motion that was proposed in the American Senate and which was voted by the British Parliament. His resolution would instruct the Government to seek the addition of a rider to the Versailles treaty calling for the further disarmament of Germany. He disclaimed any intentions of playing politics, but Government supporters expressed the opinion that his motion was a mere tactical move to the "general offensive" against the Clemenceau Cabinet.

It was plain that an active lobby campaign was in progress before the opening of the session. When the final figures were proclaimed, the opposition found solace in the fact that there were thirty-seven absentations, which, according to the French usage, counted against the Government and made M. Clemenceau's majority exactly thirty-seven.

Debate on the treaty has now been going on for six weeks, and minutes of the session cover 700 columns in The Official Journal, of which only 200 have been used by Government orators.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants an Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach an pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years an has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathart preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so muc to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roo for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have a the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating pr perties, especially when used for infants or children, that the fo mula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 3 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realis that of all the children born in civilised countries, twenty-two pe cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timel use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neithe do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths ar occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tincture and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more o less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, dead ly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation an lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility o giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher' Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

Pond's Vanishing Cream

is based on one of the most valuable skin-softening substances ever discovered, a substance whose affinity for the skin is so great that the moment it is applied it "Vanishes" and never reappears, as do many other toilet preparations.

It is fragrant and refreshing, it imparts to the skin a delightful sensation of coolness and velvety smoothness.

A light touch of POND'S VANISHING CREAM before applying powder gives the complexion an exquisite texture and a soft velvety bloom which cannot be obtained with powder alone. It is the ideal finishing touch.

As a safeguard against the ill effects of sun, wind and weather, POND'S VANISHING CREAM is simply wonderful. It preserves the necessary skin pliancy, and in the case of sunburn, does much to prevent unsightly peeling.

We want you to know, not from what we say, but from actual experience, how good POND'S VANISHING CREAM is for your skin. You have read about it, heard about it; now we want you to use it.

The Coal Strike Crushed

THE United States Government and all Americans, and the forces of law and order throughout the world generally, are to be congratulated on the collapse of the coal-miners' strike. The word "collapse" probably is not the right one. The strike was crushed by the pressure of public opinion, just as the strike of the British railwaymen was broken by the same force. Public opinion in Great Britain solidly supported the British Government in its fight on the strikers. In America the crisis was handled in a somewhat different way, but the force that stamped out the strike, was, in the last analysis the same.

In America a Federal Court was appealed to for an injunction against the strike order, and the court issued the injunction. This placed the strikers and their leaders in the position of defying the American Government and its courts. They held out for a few days, but meanwhile the Government ordered troops into the mine fields and prepared to enforce order and uphold the law, and during the same period public opinion was given a chance to express itself. The American Federation of Labor was the only body that came out in support of strike and by this action it has lowered both its power and its prestige with the general public.

The coal strike lasted eleven days. The strikers started off confidently enough but their confidence gradually waned. Legally they had not a leg to stand on, and unless their methods and grievances were such as to command the sympathy and support of the general public they could not win. And when this support was not forthcoming they quit. There was no other course open to them, short of attempted anarchy or Bolshevism, and, as the acting President of the United Mine workers said: "We are Americans: we cannot fight our Government."

The concurrent expose by the Government of a world-wide Bolshevist plot; the arrest of a thousand alien propagandists and the determination of the Government to deport this whole class of ignorant and irresponsible trouble-makers owing allegiance to no government and to no recognisable principle of human conduct save that of destruction, struck fear into the hearts of the leaders of the miners, and they lost no time "getting out from under."

As we have contended all along, the strike, as a weapon of labor, is out of date. It does not fit the times. What would happen to the world if we should all go on a strike? Civilisation would be engulfed, destroyed. Have the Bolshevists created better conditions for themselves, for Russia or for the world? Those in their army are working 24 hours a day for nothing and those in the factories 12 hours a day for nothing. Terrorism and starvation stalk abroad throughout their land. They are all in rags.

Yet when the railwaymen of Great Britain or the coal miners of America reject arbitration and attempt to take advantage of the fact that it lies within their power industrially to paralyse their countries, by separating themselves into groups apart from the general body of their countrymen, and refusing to work unless their unjust demands are met, they approach dangerously close to the line which separates civilisation from Bolshevism. The strike, we again say, does not offer a solution of the present-day Capital-Labor problem. And the results of the railwaymen's and miners' strikes serve to reassure us that public opinion in Great Britain and America is firmly for an orderly working out of the tremendous problems which confront us, and will no longer tolerate any single group of workmen separating from the rest of society and bludgeoning it into surrender of both its pride and its purse. When one group is permitted to do this, another group is encouraged to attempt the thing, with the result that we are confronted with an endless round of strikes, a continual disturbance of production which the world needs, and in fact disorder and discontent bordering on industrial chaos, with everybody getting more money, but money that is so cheapened by the higher prices resulting from lessened production that they are no better off. What stands back of money? Very little, we should say, excepting law, order and production. When we disturb these fundamentals we cheapen money. There is no law and no order and no production in Russia today and you can buy a bale of Russian money for a dollar.

In the case of the coal miners the American government by obtaining a court injunction against the strike, put this whole question right up to the miners themselves and to the people generally. And the resulting victory for law, order and production is the answer and upon that answer we congratulate America and the world.

Britain In Persia

Hostile observers who think of Great Britain as a "land-grabber" are now out with the charge that the agreement reached between Persia and the British Government at Teheran "will make of Persia another British protectorate." The main points of the agreement, we learn from the press, are two: Britain lends Persia British officers to reorganise her forces and establish order, and, conjointly with the Government of India, Britain advances to Persia £2,000,000, secured on the Persian customs. Britain also promises to support certain of Persia's claims to reparation for the damage done her by Turkey and Germany and to the rectification of her frontier. But all insinuations that the British Government has been guilty of a policy of aggrandisement are officially denied by Earl Curzon, government leader in the House of Lords and President of the Council, in a speech at a dinner in London in honor of the Foreign Minister of Persia. "Those who believe the British are going, as a result of this agreement, to settle down in Persia and to Anglicise, to Indianise, or Europeanise it in any sense of the term, are grossly mistaken," according to Lord Curzon, who assures us that "all we want to do is to give Persia expert assistance and financial aid which will enable her to carve out her own fortunes as an independent and still living country." Earl Curzon admitted that "suspicions have been aroused" as to the real character of the Persian treaty, but he declares that such suspicions rest upon "a misconception." As one expression of suspicion may be cited the objection of the Secretary of the Persian delegation at Paris, which represents the Liberal party in Persia, who is quoted in Paris despatches as follows:

"Whoever controls the finances, railroads and army of a nation controls that nation, and Persia's independence, therefore, is a thing of the past. We saw President Wilson several times, and he told us Persia would be invited to join the League, and that Article X would guarantee its complete independence in the future. He also agreed to support our claims when the Ottoman question was taken up here.

"Does the President intend to insist that the American Senate adopt Article X without change and yet allow Great Britain to defy its most important principle in Persia's case? If so the League is a sham."

Harsh criticism is fairly copious in the French press, and so important a journal as the Paris Temps avers that "since Persia promises to confide its army only to British officers and its finances only to British specialists, it has no longer force or resources to exercise its sovereignty." Le Temps adds that France resents the Persian treaty on moral grounds because of its violation of Wilsonian principles and of the League of Nations Covenant. It asserts that France has no ulterior motive for its attitude and no intention to say to England that if England will offer France something in compensation elsewhere, French scruples will vanish. "Pertinax," in L'Echo de Paris, calls the Anglo-Persian treaty an important step in the work England has been doing for the last five years to secure the foundations of her empire in India and Egypt, to which the Young Turk movement was a menace, while the conservative Paris Journal des Debats holds that the present situation is what was to be expected after the collapse of Russia. In 1917, it recalls, Persia was cut up into three zones: one Russian and one British, separated by a neutral zone. When Russia demanded Constantinople in 1916, England claimed part of the neutral zone in exchange. The old Russia is now dead, and Persia, from the Caspian to the Indian Ocean, falls within the British zone, and "so we see that while the Peace Conference floundered aimlessly among the problems of Central Europe, a policy that knows its own mind reaps the richest advantages from the war and puts into effect great changes in the East."

Positive denial of a British protectorate over Persia is made by Earl Curzon in his speech above cited, in which he said that it would have been impossible to set up a protectorate "because Persia would neither have asked for nor accepted it," and he adds:

"On the contrary, she would have resented and resisted it. I should have been opposed to it because it would have been contrary to our repeated engagements, and, in the last resort, because I should have regarded it as inimical to British interests.

"We have, or shall have, as a result of this war enough to do in the eastern parts of the world. If a nation assume a protectorate it also assumes certain responsibilities which have a tendency to attain the weight of a heavy burden. Above all, it is compelled to give financial assistance on a scale which may ultimately be overwhelming. Therefore, neither I nor my colleagues would have consented to or acquiesced in anything like the creation of a British protectorate over Persia."

As to the charge that the Persian pact ignores Articles X and XX of the Covenant of the League of Nations, Earl Curzon declares:

"I would say emphatically, on behalf of my Government and after a conversation with his Highness this afternoon, that both his Government and mine accept unreservedly Articles X and XX of the Covenant of the League of Nations, and that we see in them nothing inconsistent with what we have done. On the contrary, as soon as the Treaty of Peace is ratified and as soon as the Council of the League of Nations comes into effective existence, it is the intention of his Government and mine to communicate the agreement to the Council of the League with a full explanation and defense of its contents.

"There is another point in the agreement concerning which there has been some misunderstanding. There is a passage in it which says the two governments had agreed to the appointment of a joint committee of experts for the examination and revision of existing customs tariffs, and it seems to have been inferred that Great Britain is claiming the right to revise customs treaties not only between Persia and Great Britain, but between Persia and foreign Powers. An examination of the text shows there is no ground for this suspicion.

"Again, when we undertake in this agreement to co-operate with the Persian Government for the encouragement of Anglo-Persian enterprises, for the development of the country, we create thereby no monopoly. We claim no exclusive rights for ourselves to the exclusion of other Powers, and, indeed, some of them have rendered substantial service to that country."

Frank reply to French criticism of the Anglo-Persian agreement is made by some London papers, among them The Daily Telegraph, which asserts that "no covetous designs of any kind underlie our agreement," and The Daily Chronicle observes.

"No doubt we shall be accused of endeavoring to establish in Persia a second Egypt, but that is not our intention, nor is it to the interests of this country. A prosperous, well-governed, self-dependent, and friendly Persia will be of infinitely more value to us than discontented and dependent."

But a voice of bitter dissent is heard in the avowal of the London Daily News that—

"Our record up to the present in this matter is anything but creditable. We have committed ourselves to an agreement with France incompatible with any genuine belief in the efficacy of the League. We have concluded an agreement with Persia constituting an open mockery of the principles that the League embodies. We have announced a scheme for the preference for mandate territories no less incompatible with the spirit underlying the whole Covenant."

Greed Of Labor May Force Capital To Strike

By S. S. Fontaine
(New York World)

If the foreign element among the steel workers of the country succeed in forcing a general close down of the industry they are merely hastening what is bound to come in the long run, unless the present attitude of the radical element of organised labor changes, and that is a general strike of capital. There is limit beyond which the most liberal and courageous enterprise cannot go, and this pale lies not far ahead. The investors of the country, who provide the funds to finance its industries, are already impatient with the exorbitant and exacting demands of the more greedy element among the workers, and their impatience is shared by the patriotic and farseeing labor leaders of the conservative group and by the great majority of the general public.

LIVE AND LET LIVE

This impatience is just as well warranted as was the national intolerance of the inordinate greed of capital a generation ago, which found expression in the Sherman law and other statutes that have brought this evil to some degree within control, while a larger experience and, let us hope, a greater morality, has inducted into the minds of the employing class a more liberal appreciation of its obligations to the employed and to the public. If we are not to have a universal withdrawal of capital from constructive undertakings, the complete abandonment of new enterprises and the eventual soup houses and bread lines, labor, organised and unorganised, must learn the same lesson that capital has been forced to learn. It is a lesson as old as the hills and four words only compose its text. They are: "Live and let live."

LOSING ITS IDEALS

Very tersely the situation has been summed up for the writer by a former radical who has become almost converted to conservatism by the trend of the times in the labor field. "Twenty years ago," he said, "capital had no ideals. Now labor has none," and the fault, many wise people believe, lies very largely with the fact that we have not completely assimilated the immigration that has come to us in that space of time, and, considering some of the morsels, it is not surprising that we are suffering in spots from racial indigestion. And yet, if we study the records of the draft and remember the heroism and sacrifice of our boys of alien parentage, we will realise that we shall speedily absorb the disagreeable particles that now disturb us.

But in the mean time there is growing a strong feeling of resentment at the interference on the part of elements not in sympathy with our institutions, although they have sought their protection with the orderly processes of economic readjustment which, if permitted to work out on natural lines, would speedily solve the graver problems that confront our country. It is fortunate for us that at this critical juncture in our affairs we have solidly behind our traditions and our ideals several million young men who, imbued with the loftiest spirit of patriotism, and trained to the habit of order, are just entering upon the obligations of citizenship. Having immolated themselves upon the altar of world democracy, they are in themselves the living guarantee of the suppression of license and the survival of liberty.

CAUSE FOR RESENTMENT

And among no class is there greater intolerance of the conditions that have been created in this country by the greed of certain alien elements than among the boys who answered their country's call when the hour of its need struck. While they were fighting in France, or awaiting the chance to fight, at $30 a month, the steel puddlers, many or them unnaturalised foreigners, were drawing $30 a day because of the urgency of the hour and the labor shortage created by the withdrawal of the boys in khaki from industrial vocations. As an emergency condition it might have warranted no just resentment had it remained so, but it has not. The substitute still continues to prosper, while numbers of the boys who have come back from camp or over there have not, now that the hurrah time is over, been receiving all that is coming to them.

It is true that in many cases jobs have been held open for them by the more liberal class of employers, but in instances by no means rare they have suffered from loss of seniority, missed chances of promotion, and in many other ways have been made to feel that the stay-at-home got all the best of it. In many other cases promises of reinstatement have been deliberately broken by employers, and every one knows that there are thousands of the boys who came back who have not as yet found any opportunity to share commensurately in the genera prosperity of which they see so much evidence on every hand.

GET BACK TO WORK

These men, in common with a very large majority of the people of the country who work for a living, are sufferers from the high cost of production, due in no small degree to the high wages which certain highly organised workers can exact, and the whole country is suffering from the inefficiency of labor. The lust for loafing is eating into the very marrows of our industrial life. We will never get back to the old order of things until everybody gets back to work in the old way and with the same old will. The old saying that you cannot eat your cake and have it too was true enough. It is equally true that before you get the cake you have got to bake it, and nobody seems to want to do that nowadays.

CAPITAL HAS LONG HOURS

The average man who works for shorter hours does not seem to think that capital does any work at all. As a matter of fact, it works 168 hours a week, and at times like these they are very anxious hours. Unless it has much less cause for anxiety it may go on a general strike, and that will be much more serious and much more far reaching in its consequences than a steel strike. Without public opinion behind it no strike can be successful. The people may be depended on to support at all times the just grievances of men and women who work for a living. But it is pretty hard to get up any sympathy, in view of all the circumstances, for workers whose wages have been increased 169 percent since the year before the war began.

Italy Has New Operas

Now York, October 6.—Musical Italy, instead of being starved for a supply of its favorite operatic fare, is said to have more new works than can be housed even in a land where every smallest town has its opera house fit for a large city. Composers and publishers are "straining every nerve," according to a correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph. The crucial difficulty is a financial one; no Government subsidy is forthcoming, and the municipalities support opera in amounts that fail to tempt speculative risks.

A new opera of Mascagni entitled "Piccolo Marrar," to which the composer is now putting the finishing touches, is being looked forward to with particular interest in musical circles. It consists of three acts, and is of a most dramatic nature. It is destined, if all goes well, for the Constanzia, Rome, in the next carnival season.

Of the astute Puccini, a recent report has it that he plans to write next on an English theme, from Dickens's "Old Curiosity Shop" or Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing." His wartime production, "The Swallow," which has been much appreciated in Italy recently—as have also his three new one-act operas—is said to be undergoing an interesting transformation and will be heard another year in London.

The noted Trent composer, Zandonai, whose "Conchita" and "Francesca da Rimini" have been staged at Covent Garden as well as on this side of the Atlantic, is also active at present. Since the success of his sentimental musical comedy, "The Cricket on the Hearth," he has followed suit with "The Way of the Widow," given for the first time with unusual success at the Rossini Theater of Pesaro. The work is adopted by Adami from a work by Scribe. The scene is laid in Tuscany in the Spring of 1800 at picturesque villa of a Tuscan squire. The surroundings are thus characteristically Italian, and additional charm is lent by the dainty coloring of the costumes of the early part of the last century. "The theater was packed with the elite of Pesaro," said a review of the premiere, "while the leading musical critics had flocked to it from all parts of Italy. The public was unanimous in showing its entire satisfaction at the fact that the composer had returned to a simple style of utterance. The music throughout is worthy of the highest praise, and in his new work without doubt, Zandonai has given fresh evidence of his great operatic talent. The success of the opera was really magnificent. In all there were twenty-eight curtain recalls, while the prelude of the third act was warmly encored.

Women Workers

(New York Times)

"Women have always worked!" The phrase runs like an undertone through the little monograph which the Young Women's Christian Association has issued for the guidance and inspiration of wage-working and voting women. But that is only half the message. Though for women, as for men, labor is natural and eternal, the basic conditions of woman's labor are in process of transformation.

Through all previous eras, industry centered in the individual household; women worked for themselves and for their children, who grew up beneath the same roof. With the coming of changed conditions many women were taken out of the home. But the vitality of women as mothers and their moral influence through the home suffered a loss which society as yet only vaguely appreciates, and for which it has found only ineffective and fumbling remedies. The title of the present monograph is "Legal Recognition of Industrial Women;" but the dominant thought of its authors, Ray S. Trent of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce and Eleanor L. Lattimore, Ph.D., is for the health of women and for the vitality of the home.

Of the need of "humanising" labor for men we hear much, but of the far greater need of humane consideration for the woman laborer we hear less. Women are muscularly weaker and physically unstable; they are temperamentally more sensitive to environment; they are more liable to bodily disease. In the old days, when their industry was in their own homes, the burden of life pressed heavily enough; today it is intensified tenfold. Men have always gone forth in the world to work; for them the personal relationships, as lover and husband and father, are best served by hard and steady labor in factory or office. For a woman the personal relationships are ceaselessly at war with industry outside the home. In proportion as she succeeds as employe she fails as wife and mother. The alternative she faces is truly tragic. If she chooses the life of the home, she feels that she renounces her human birthright and her normal human instinct as a productive laborer. If she chooses wage earning, her womanly instincts are daily ground down in the remorseless machinery of office or factory.

The little monograph of the Young Women's Christian Association discusses the legal measures, enacted or proposed, for harmonising the productive with the reproductive life of women. It is not an easy problem. During the war the number of women wage earners rose to almost twelve millions. In the more industrial States, of all females over ten years of age one in every five is a wage earner. Of these, about one in ten is under 16. "The typical female bread-winner is a young girl still in her teens or very early twenties." For these, bread-winning is largely "a makeshift until the event of marriage." Yet available statistics show that out of American women workers 20 years old and more from 25 to 40 percent are married. Abstract justice demands that women should receive equal pay with men for equal work. Yet the human fact is that many women workers are supported in a large measure by their men folk, while others have not only to support a family, but must care for their children as mothers. Industrial women range, in short, from those who have less than the responsibility of any man to those who have far more responsibility. Under the unchecked working of the law of demand and supply, monstrous injustices result which, especially in the case of the child worker and the mother, threaten all that is most vital in the national well-being.

No problem of the woman worker can as yet be regarded as solved. For girls who live at home, a minimum wage spells abundance as surely as it spells penury to the self-supporting woman and disaster to the widowed or divorced mother. Even an eight-hour law and the prohibition of night work may bring an occasional hardship—as in seasonal industries, such as canning, which for many children and women bring the only opportunity throughout the year of profitable labor. Social insurance against sickness and injury, and maternity benefits during the period of childbirth, have been adopted in a rapidly increasing number of States and in the main, promise well; yet they have given rise to an alarmingly widespread practice of fraud and graft.

Much local betterment has resulted of late from the fact that employers of the wiser sort have learned that proper care of working women not only is humane and patriotic, but that in the long run it pays. The problem as a whole, however, is too widespread and too deeply enmeshed in our fundamentally changing institutions to admit of radical and efficient remedy, except through a long process of evolutionary reform. Something can be done by disseminating knowledge and inspiring right feeling, as this little monograph does. Throughout the country women are rapidly becoming voters. It lies in their power to establish governmental regulations to protect the woman worker and to see that they are honestly and effectively administered.

The Advantage Of Being Plain Jane

By A. Maria Crawford

"There's no use, Caroline, in trying to fix me up. If I spent a whole day massaging my face with cold cream, steaming and rubbing it with ice, curling my hair and doing all the hundred and one things that you think will improve my appearance, I'd still be a freckled, snub-nosed, stringy-haired, plain Jane. The Creator simply didn't mean for me to be good looking. That's all there is about it."

"But you must think about your future," warned the cousin whom Jane was visiting. "Mother said that you could be a real success if you would only put yourself in our hands and let us help you."

"Help me to do what, get married?" asked Jane, with a grin. She turned around on the dressing table bench to face her tall, statuesque cousin, who was sitting by a window polishing her nails. "There is only one reason for marriage," she said, seriously, "and that is love. I hate to hear people talk of advantageous marriages. It is putting something holy on a commercial basis."

"Tut, Jane, you talk like a reformer in a novel. Everything that is successful nowadays has to be placed on a commercial basis."

"Motherhood?" tersely demanded Jane.

"Well, yes, in a way," answered Caroline doubtfully. "One ought not to have more children than they can comfortably support. Anyway, if a woman is progressive and keeps herself informed, she hasn't time for a big family. We've had social and civic things. Now, we're going in for politics. If we make ourselves felt in national affairs—"

"See here," said Jane, interrupting her, "there isn't anything that a woman can do half as important to her country as to bear and rear healthy, happy children. Let's talk about something else! I'm enjoying my visit here and the first thing I know I'll be taking the afternoon train home, after being put out on the street with my trunk," she laughed. "You see I have a red-headed temper even if my hair is three shades of streaky brown."

Caroline laughed with her and passed a box of chocolates. "By the way, Jane, mother had a note this morning from Felix Marshall. He sent this candy, too. Wants to call some time today. Why didn't you tell me you knew him?"

"Knew Felix? Why, he has lived for years on the next block from us at home."

"He wrote that he was in the city on very important business and would like to see us if convenient some time this afternoon. Mother says that he is enormously rich. I think that I'll visit you this Winter. I didn't dream that you had such eligibles in a little town like Martenville."

"Felix lives there, I suppose, because he owns everything in town—mills, electric company, ice plant—everything, as I said."

"Does he pay any attention to you girls?" asked Caroline, shrewdly.

"He goes around a little, not much. I never saw him with any one girl enough to make folks gossip. He drops in to see Dad right often. Dad sold him forty-nine percent interest in our mill, you know," explained Jane indifferently.

"Do you call him Felix?"

"Yes, because he taught us to call him that when I was just a kid. He's not much of a lady's man. You probably won't care for him."

"Not when he is as rich as cream? Silly! I'm going to wear a new blue gown this afternoon. It's perfectly stunning. I made a date for you to go riding with Phil Edmonds at three. Phil likes you, and he is a great catch for any girl. I'm going to do your hair, put a net over it to make it look smooth. I want to rough your cheeks a little, too, and touch your chin and eyelids with it. It will do wonders, Jane. Please let me try! I tell you I can make you positively pretty."

Jane turned back to the triple mirrors, studying herself thoughtfully. "I think that it's awfully kind of Felix to drop in. I hate to go away when he is coming, but you'll explain to him, won't you? I told him you were a great beauty. That's probably why he is calling here, and then it's a courtesy to Dad, of course, as long as I am visiting you." Jane twisted and untwisted her uneven, brown hair.

"Well, come along and see what you can do for me, Caroline. I've been tempted, now I'm going to fall. If you can do anything to make me better looking, I'm ready for it."

"Now you're sensible," laughed Caroline, carelessly trailing a georgette negligee as she crossed the room to Jane. "I'll loan you my little sable neckpiece this afternoon and tie a pretty veil over your blue sailor. You'd love veils if you would wear one just one time. They're becoming to almost everybody Do you like Phil, Jane?"

"Why do you ask me that? Because I've fallen from grace and want to be powdered, roughed and curled for once in my quiet life." She looked up, almost resentfully, at the pretty girl bending over her. "Yes, I do like him. He's fine, but it's as plain as the nose on your face that he's crazy about you and that he is being nice to me just because I'm visiting you."

It was dusk when Jane returned from a long ride in Phil's smart roadster. Through the open living room door she saw Caroline, as pretty as a picture in a French blue frock, pouring tea for Feliz Marshall from a tea cart drawn up before a log fire. Felix was laughing in his deep, full throated way. The familiar sound of it sent a quiver to Jane's firmly compressed lips. Outside little gusts of wind stripped the dying leaves from the trees and whirled them away like tiny, rudderless air ships. Jane heard the sighing of the wind and the mournfulness of it echoed in her own heart, but she went bravely forward to greet the gay couple by the glowing hearth

Felix set his cup down and stared at Jane. "Why, I didn't know you," he stammered. He was obviously ill at ease, and because she had interrupted his pleasant tete-a-tete with her lovely cousin, miserable as it is possible for any girl to be.

"I'll go to call mother again," explained the wily Caroline. "I'm sure that she doesn't know you are here, Mr. Marshall."

When she had gone, Felix took Jane's suddenly cold, trembling little hands in his and looked down at her. "What have they done to you, Jane? Why, they've tried to cover up all your prettiness and natural charm, under rouge and powder. What's the matter? Aren't you glad to see me?"

There was a new note in his voice and Jane raised timid eyes to his. "O, Felix!" she said brokenly, "I guess I'm homesick."

Felix opened his arms and Jane went straight into them. "I was such a fool to let you go away," he whispered. "I love you, Jane. I think I must have always loved you. I came all the way here to tell you and then when I found that you had fixed yourself all up and gone out riding with a fellow who is in love with you"——

"He's not," gasped Jane, "and I let Caroline fix me up to see you because—because I thought that she was so pretty and that I"——

"She'll never see the day she's half as good looking as you are. Jane, dear, take that old veil from over your face. I'm not going to kiss you, the very first time, through that."

Precious Stones In The United States

The value of the diamonds in the United States at the present time is apparently more than $1,000,000,000. As early as 1900 a distinguished diamond expert of the United States said "it may be safely said that $500,000,000 worth of diamonds are owned in the United States," and a compilation made by the National City Bank of New York shows that the value of diamonds imported since 1900 is $506,000,000. This alone would bring the total value of the diamonds of the country above the billion-dollar line, but when it is remembered that $190,000,000 worth of the diamonds imported since 1900 came in the uncut state, and that their value was doubled by the cutting process which occurred within this country it is apparent that the value of the stock in the country is considerably more than $1,000,000,000, to say nothing of the further fact that prices of diamonds have increased materially during the war.

About one-half of the world's diamonds are now apparently owned in the United States. An estimate made in 1900 by the authority above quoted put the value of the world's stock of diamonds at rather more than $1,000,000,000, and indicated that the United States then owned about one-third of the total known stock. With the rapid additions to our own stock through the importation of $550,000,000 worth since 1900 it seems probable that fully one-half of the world's stock of diamonds is now held in the United States.

The popularity of the pearl made itself apparent during the early part of the war, the importation of pearls into the United States jumping from $2,000,000 in 1912 to over $10,000,000 in the calendar year 1916, and about $9,000,000 in 1917, but dropping by reason of scarcity to less than $2,000,000 in 1918. The 1919 figures, however, show a slight increase in pearls.

DANCE IS TO PROVIDE CHRISTMAS FOR POOR

Shanghai Charity League Seeks To Stimulate Interest In Its Work Here

Funds for a Christmas celebration for the worthy poor are to be raised by a tea dance to be given at the Carlton Cafe on Sunday afternoon, November 23, by the Shanghai Charity League. Admission tickets are on sale for one dollar.

The Charity League was organised by the Mothers of the Convent of the Holy Family in June, 1914, the number of applicants for charitable assistance from them having become too numerous for them to cope with. They decided that the work could be more thoroughly carried out if a Committee was formed of ladies who would devote some of their time to visiting the poor and otherwise assisting them.

IN WELFARE WORK

For five and a half years the League has carried on this work. The Committee ladies meet each month, more often if necessary, at the Convent of the Holy Family. To each member of the Committee is allotted the care of one or more poor families and it is her duty to visit them, see that they have medical attention when ill and otherwise look after their welfare.

In addition to these features the League pays the rent for two families living in Chinese houses and maintains a "Home." This is a house consisting of eight living rooms, four bathrooms and four kitchens and accommodates, comfortably, six families.

Seventy-five junior members of the Committee meet every Wednesday evening at the Convent of the Holy Family to sew for the poor. Owing to the devotion of these junior members to their task the League has been able to distribute every year, at its Christmas entertainment, a large quantity of warm clothing, quilts and similar presents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS NEEDED

In previous years the number of guests at these Christmas entertainments has numbered at least 200 persons. This year, it is estimated, there will be 300 in attendance. There will be motion pictures, music and gifts and no pains will be spared to make the event a cheerful one.

Subscriptions for the aid of the League's work are badly needed, members of the Committee say, because the enterprise has been growing so rapidly and its work has so expended that the present income is insufficient to meet the expense.

It is expected that there will be a large attendance at the tea dance and, it is hoped, the event will result in wider public interest in the work of the League.
